SWINDLERS WORK POSTAL SCHEMES

Prey on Relatives of Deceased Persons to Profit By Parcels

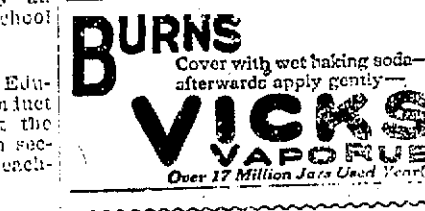

TULSA, Oct. 31.—Operations of swindlers who prey upon relatives of persons of recent death have been revealed here by United States postal inspectors. Several arrests made by postal officials have disclosed that the scheme is in use throughout the United States. There is a certain type of swindler who is a constant reader of the obituary notices, a postpaid inspector said. "He buys the newspapers of all the large cities and makes a list of the names of persons who have just died. He then takes some article of little value and mails it to the deceased person. C. O. D. In most cases the family of the dead person will pay the cash on delivery charge, assuming that the departed relative has ordered the article. Sentiment often overrides caution.

"These swindlers are often connected with 'fly-by-night' mail order concerns. They will send worthless fountain pens, articles of clothing, household utensils, in fact anything upon which they can realize a sum of money. Some of them make a specialty of sending religious articles and books to the names of the persons who have been known

"Carelessness, the quality that has been the downfall of many clever crooks and swindlers, resulted in the arrest of one of these swindlers and his subsequent prosecution. He mailed a C. O. D. package addressed to a young woman who had just died, using her given name 'Estelle'. The young woman had used a nickname 'Stella' for a number of years before her death and always had signed her name with 'Stella' instead of 'Estelle'. Her obituary notice gave her correct name. A relative noticed that the C. O. D. package was addressed to 'Estelle' and became suspicious. An investigation followed, the swindle was discovered and the author apprehended."

Persons receiving C. O. D. packages about which they know nothing are urged to report the matter to their postmaster, the inspector said.

OUT OF ALASKAN WILDS

Official Report Tells How Army Aviators Fought Back to Civilization When "Round-World" Plane Crashed in Northwestern Wilderness.

HOW Major Frederick L. Martin and his mechanic, Sergeant Alva L. Harvey, whose round-the-world flight ended prematurely against an Alaskan mountain, came back to a nation which had mourned them as dead is told completely and fascinatingly in the official report of their experiences just made public by the Chief of the Army Air Service.

News dispatches at the time told in brief of the great adventure, but the complete story can be found only in the modest language of the official report. It will be recalled how the flag plane "Seattle," hastening to overtake the other planes at Dutch Harbor, ran into a fog shortly after taking off from Chignik Bay on April 30 and crashed against the side of a mountain.

Out of World Flight
"Further participation in the round-the-world flight was at an end," is the way Major Martin's report sums up the examination of the wrecked plane. "We thoroughly appreciated our plight, as we knew this part of the Western Peninsula to be uninhabited, excepting by a few people at considerable distance along the shore line."

With the characteristic initiative of the air service, the two flyers spent little time in bemoaning their bad luck. They immediately selected the supplies they needed from the equipment on board and prepared their packs for hiking. For food they had several sandwiches, which they ate at once; a dozen malted milk tablets and two thermos bottles of concentrated liquid food.

Use Pocket Flashlight
A curious individual, after the Major's return from his perils, asked him to enumerate the various supplies they had put in the packs. The Major ticked them off on his fingertips, naming, among others, a pocket flashlight. "Why the flashlight when you were trying to make as light a pack as possible?" was the next question.

"I have always considered a flashlight a very necessary part of the equipment for airplanes," the Major replied. "The flashlight we had on the 'Seattle' proved of great value to both Sergeant Harvey and myself when we had occasion to be around the plane at night or in walking about in the little villages where we were forced to stop and where street lighting was not in evidence.

"Notwithstanding the fact that we reduced the weight which we had to carry with us in our struggle to get back to civilization from where we crashed, we kept our flashlight with us. We found it very valuable at night, as we had no light except the meagre light furnished by a very small fire."

Start to Coast
But, to return to the report, the two flyers, having completed their few arrangements for a long and perilous journey, started off at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, figuring that they were ten miles from the Pacific Coast line and separated from it by a mountain range.

"The fog was very dense," was so white as to blend completely with the snow," is the way Major Martin's report reads. "The snow was deep and smooth, leaving practically no objects visible."

Return to Plane
For two hours the two men kept diligently at it and then, finding no place for a night's shelter, decided to return to the plane. They retraced their route, following their footprints, and in seventeen minutes reached the plane. The report relates the discomfort of the ensuing night when they crawled into the baggage compartment of the fuselage, turned at an angle of forty-five degrees, and slept fitfully, cramped and cold and with the man in the lower part supporting some of the weight of the man above him. The next day the fog was still dense and they remained with the plane, building a wall of snow, making a small fire and dragging the right wing over them as a shelter.

Saved From Death
On the morning of May 2, although the fog still existed, they decided to again try to reach the Pacific Ocean. "By permitting the one breaking the trail through the snow to precede the one following by 100 feet it was possible to guide the leader in more nearly a straight line," the report reads. "In this way we succeeded in passing over the mountain to the southward and down its side to a small creek. Pushing on southward, we climbed to the top of a steep mountain the surface of which was not broken to any great extent. At this time the fog lifted slightly, just in time to save us from imminent danger. Directly in front of us and but four or five paces distant the mountain sloped down so abruptly that it would have been impossible to have retained one's footing and which would have meant that we would have slipped down into a canyon about 1,500 feet.

Cold Prevents Sleep
"We located an alder thicket where a few dead alders could be obtained for fuel and made our camp on the snow by cutting green branches with our knives to keep us out of the snow and starting a fire, around which we sat during the night. As our clothing was just enough to make us feel comfortable when exercising freely, it was far from being sufficient during the night, as we gained little heat from the small fire which we could maintain. It was impossible to lie down, and as it was necessary that one be constantly vigilant to keep the fire burning we rested but little."

The next morning they started back for the plane. They arrived at the wreck in the afternoon and by this time "Sergeant Harvey's eyes were in a very aggravated condition. He could hardly see, although we were wearing amber colored goggles which we had taken with us on leaving the airplane."

With binoculars taken from the first aid kit the inflammation was reduced to nearly normal by the following morning. The fog lifted the following morning and the two intrepid men set out again for the mountain they had traversed the day before. There was no opening visible in the rock walls to the southward, but to the southwest they saw a lake. Thinking a belated trooper might be found somewhere in its vicinity, they started for it at 11 o'clock. Dusk found them still four miles from their goal, so they hunted up another alder thicket and made camp. Two ptarmigans, an Alaskan bird much like a pigeon, were killed with an army pistol, and one of these was cooked for supper. Also they increased their liquid food from two to three teaspoonsful per meal.

Much to their disappointment, when they reached the lake on the following morning, they found its shores uninhabited. However, it coincided with one on their map, and although the stream from it seemed to run contrary to the direction shown on the map they determined to follow it, believing they would reach Ivanof Bay.

Martin Snow Blind
The stream ran through a valley three miles wide and the ground was marshy, the snow being partly melted and in places covered with water. Major Martin's eyes were in such terrible condition that Sergeant Harvey had to lead the way. "We were weak and exhausted," is the way the Major dismisses their suffering.

By 2 o'clock both men were too fatigued to continue further. They found a dry camp with plenty of dead wood and made a camp which was the first one to be sheltered from the wind. Around the fire they had four hours of slumber, "the first real sleep we had experienced since our crash," the report states.

"The First Real Hope"
On May 5 they continued the march through the swamp. There were numerous dry stream beds, and one of these they followed into the mountain. The dry bed of the stream came to an end, but three miles further they came to another stream flowing southward.

"This was our first real hope," the Major says, "as this stream no doubt would take us to the shore line."

The traveling became more difficult and the previous struggle of the day before left them in "a very weakened condition." So at 3 o'clock they halted while Sergeant Harvey made reconnaissance. He reported that three miles further on he had seen a large body of water. They could not make it that night, so they pitched camp in a clump of alders on top of four feet of snow.

"We were so weakened as to make it necessary to support ourselves by holding on to the alders while we were gathering up our firewood, and there was a slight wind from the north which chilled us to the bone," says the report.

Salt Water at Last!
Nevertheless, at 3:30 the next morning they started off. Four hours later they reached the water, and were delighted to find it salt. There were no signs of human life, but along the beach they "observed a small cabin about a half mile distant."

The report says nothing of the feelings which must have stirred them at the discovery. What if the cabin were unoccupied? There were signs of very recent habitation and, better than that, there was a fairly well stocked larder. All they could eat, because of the condition of their stomachs, were two hot cakes apiece. They built a fire and dropped to sleep. Four hours later they awoke, shivering. The fire had burned out. They ate again—just what is not said—but some salmon to soak went back to sleep and awoke at 5 o'clock the next morning.

Back to Civilization
Compared to what had gone before their existence from then on was solid comfort. It rained, and they ventured out only for a short walk and determined they were on Moller Bay, at the Behring Sea. Wild ducks and two snow-shoe rabbits added fresh meat to their larder, and they feasted and rested on May 9 as well. Then, on May 10, they started for Port Moller, twenty-five miles away. Imagine their joy when, after a long hard hike along the beach, they came to a spot beyond which was the Port Moller Cannery, with smoke coming from the stack. A launch, occupied by Eskimos, happened along, took them across, and deposited them at the cannery at 6 p. m. Before nightfall, wireless messages told the world that the aviators had come back to life out of the Alaskan wilderness.

KARNAK

Proves To Oklahoma Woman It Is Entirely Different From Other Medicine

Mrs. M. F. Cole, formerly a resident of Oklahoma City for sixteen years, now living at Harrah, Okla., is still another beloved Oklahoman who states she was so discouraged over not being able to find anything to help her that she had begun to think all medicines alike, but that when she finally got Karnak it was so different she obtained almost immediate relief.

"My I was suffering so dreadfully from stomach trouble that it just seemed to be poisoning my entire system," declares Mrs. Cole, "and I had rheumatism in my legs and shoulders that was causing me no end of trouble. Bad colic broke out on me, I had terrible dizzy headaches, and had awful pains through my back and kidneys. I was so discouraged over my condition I just didn't know what to try next."

"After reading about Karnak, I got this new medicine, and it was just what I needed. It is simply amazing how quickly I was eating with relish and how soon the rheumatism disappeared. I just feel splendid in every way now, sleep sound and restful, and can't say enough for Karnak. I recommend it to everybody."

Karnak is sold in Ada exclusively at Gwin & Mays and in Stonecreek at Chas. Burnett's.—Adv.

EXAMPLES OF HOW TARIFF LAW WORKS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 31.—President Coolidge, in his speech before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, did not bother with details about what the Fordney tariff has done for the farmer. He contented himself with the broad general statement that "almost everything that is used in the business of farming is on the free list, while almost everything that the farmer raises is protected."

The statement is nominally true, but every analysis of the tariff shows that the "protection" accorded the farmer resembled protecting a stepping stone against mosquitoes with a fish net. He gets no benefit from protection on any important products except wool and sugar. The great staple crops of which the United States produces a surplus are sold at world market prices and are not benefited at all by tariff "protection." The statement that the things the farmer uses in his business are on the free list is equally deceptive though, to a certain extent it is technically true.

Farm implements and machinery, for instance, are on the free list. Yet the Fair Tariff League, a protectionist organization headed by a former farm implement manufacturer, shows that the tariff costs the farmers of the United States $100,000,000 a year in the price of farm implements.

The joke is that while the finished implement is on the free list, steel and all the metals that go into its manufacture are highly taxed. Bar steel, the chief material in the manufacture of farm machinery, is taxed 27 per cent of its value. This the manufacturer pays and passes on, with a profit, to the dealer, who passes it on with another added per centage to the farmer.

Definite figures show what effect this has on the price the farmer pays for his machinery. At the beginning of the present administration, a grain binder sold for $146. After the Fordney-McCumber tariff law was passed the same binder sold for $166. A reaper that cost the farmer $85 before the Republicans started tinkering with the tariff cost him $99 immediately after the Fordney law was passed. These are the figures of the Federal Trade Commission.

They show what happens to the price of those things used by the farmer in his business which are technically on the free list. But it is not true that most of the things he uses in his business are on the free list.

The lock the farmer uses on his corn crib door is taxed forty per cent of its value.

The woven wire with which he fences his fields is taxed thirty-nine per cent of its value.

The pall in which he milks his cow is taxed forty per cent of its value.

The nails he has to use every day are taxed sixteen per cent of their value.

The screws he has to use every time anything goes wrong with a piece of machinery are taxed twenty-five per cent of their value.

The file with which he sharpens his saw, as well as the saw itself, is taxed forty-four per cent.

The hardware that goes into the saddle he rides is taxed forty-two and a half per cent.

The pump that draws the water out of his well for the stock is taxed thirty per cent.

Similar rates apply to the great majority of articles that the farmer uses in his business.

Other important articles the farmer uses are, like machinery, on the free list in manufactured form, but with raw materials heavily taxed. It is boasted by Republicans, for instance, that fertilizer is on the free list. But sulphate of ammonia, the most important ingredient of commercial fertilizer, is taxed two cents a pound. In the most common formula, 320 pounds of sulphate of ammonia is used in mixing a ton of fertilizer. The tariff, therefore, increased the price of a ton of fertilizer by $6.40 plus whatever "padding" is done between manufacturer's price and retailer's price. Crushed limestone, extensively used to increase production by making available fertilizer elements already in the soil, is taxed five-eighths of a cent a pound.

Real farmers know these facts. It is only "pictorial farmers" who believe, or pretend to believe, that the things the farmer uses in his business are really on the free list.

New Method Heals Pyorrhea

Ten-Year Bad Case Completely
Healed in a Short Time
Writes Florida
Woman

"Paced with the loss of her teeth, after 10 years' suffering, Mrs. M. J. Travis, an esteemed resident of Jacksonville, declares she finally saved her teeth by a simple home treatment: 'worth its weight in gold,' using her own words. 'After having pyorrhea for 10 years, my mouth is now healed. Before I found out differently, I was told there was no relief and had yielded to the loss of six fine solid teeth. Then I discovered Moore's pyorrhea treatment. Three days after starting its use, the soreness left my gums; my teeth began to tighten. Now my teeth are clean, my breath sweet and my stomach completely healed.'"

The experience of Mrs. Travis is duplicated in hundreds of other cases. If you have pyorrhea—or threatened with pyorrhea—your teeth are in danger. Quick and effective treatment is necessary. You can test without money risk, the treatment used by Mrs. Travis. Simply write the Moore-Kelley Co., 1247 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo. Under their guarantee of refund, send two dollars. Or, pay postman the $2 with few cents postage. Use the treatment 7 days. Then if you are not wholly satisfied write to that effect, and your $2 will be returned at once.

FOX PRODUCTION OF "INFERNO" DELIGHTS DEVOTEES

Admirers of the great poet Dante, patrons of literature in general and just plain honest motion picture "fans" found equal enjoyment last night at the American Theatre in watching the first performance of "Dante's Inferno," produced by William Fox from literature's most famous allegory. The response from the audience indicated quite plainly that this picture has not been overrated in advance notices and that it is one in which every kind of motion picture devotee will be pleased.

As far as the poem "Inferno," on which the picture is based, is concerned, it can be said that Henry Otto, director, not only has adhered to the spirit of the classic but has injected into his picture the product of his own vivid imagination. Pictorialization of the various circles and depths of Hell offers something entirely new in photographic effects and will prove a high mark for all cameramen to shoot at for some time to come. Joseph August is credited with the photography.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

BLESS THE LORD, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction.—Psalm 103:2-4.

HE KILLED HIS FATHER.

A prominent Chicago business man died Monday in his home. Bent and broken he crumbled as if very aged. Yet he was but fifty-six. He had labored to make the home in which he died. Yet out of that home came his slayer. It was his own son. A son pampered with petting and favors, affection and indulgences.

Richard Loeb is that son. He is in the penitentiary because he thought it would be a thrilling prank to kidnap a child, demand ransom and kill the innocent victim. He wanted the thrill of the high crime adventure. That thrill made his middle aged father an old and broken man. It killed him.

The youth who is in the penitentiary murdered his own father. There should be laws that would forever lock the iron bars that hold wit in penitentiary walls so dangerous a mind as that of Richard Loeb. Society is fearful that some sentimental or corrupt governor may some day release such a fiend to again jeopardize society. The persons who are doing the most to perpetuate the institution of capital punishment are the governors who indulge in wholesale pardoning, hurling back into society the criminals that society has spent thought and labor and money to convict, created courts, paid high prosecuting attorneys and judges and built jails and penitentiaries to protect itself from. Governors who will empty a penitentiary and hurl back into society those who are its greatest menace, high officials who have no social sense of responsibility, become the most dangerous of all criminals.

The death of Albert Loeb in Chicago Monday revives the resentment against the too free power given to governors to endanger society by the thoughtless or purchaseable power of the pardon. Lastly, it brings to the heart-stricken mother who survives the stabbed father, the sympathy of all who are rightly outraged by the life of the son.—Tulsa Tribune.

Press dispatches indicate that the worm, in this case the American tourist of Europe, is turning at last as the result of being mercilessly skinned on every hand. Last year the Germans made many enemies among the tourists by their extortionate prices and all sorts of annoyances placed in the way of the tourists. This year the tourists in Germany were very scarce. In other countries they were treated with more cordiality than in Germany, but even then they complained about being made to pay higher prices for hotel accommodations and such commodities as they needed hence these countries will likely find business slack next year. The hundreds of millions of dollars spent annually by American travelers has been a large item with Europeans and it is certainly a very short sighted policy to drive the travelers from their shores.

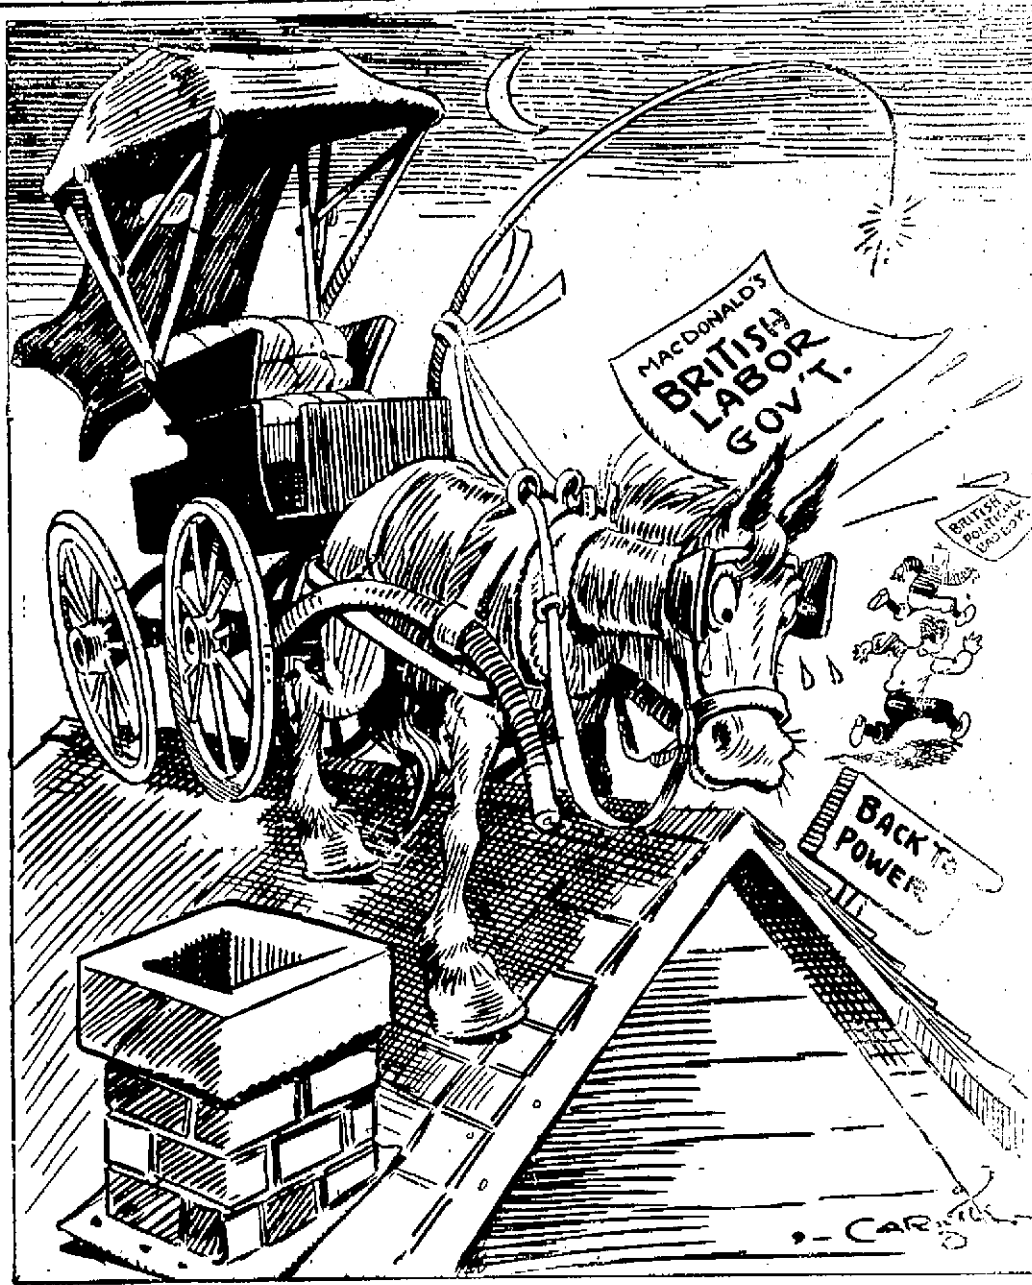

The British have held their election and the old Conservative party is again in power, both Labor and Liberal parties being much in the minority. From this distance it appears that the Labor government was conducted fairly well. Under its guidance the old time friendly relations with France, which were becoming somewhat strained, were restored and the Dawes committee plan for reparations was put into effect. Other things of importance were also accomplished, but the nation did not look with favor on MacDonald's policy towards soviet Russia. Another cause for the loss of power was that MacDonald found himself unable to solve the unemployment problem which has been a serious matter with the country for several years. This undoubtedly cost his party thousands of votes.

An unusual feature of the present campaign is the appeal that candidates, national and the various states, are making for the negro vote. Since the drift northward of many thousands of negroes began a few years ago thousands of voters have been added to the electorate of several doubtful states and the colored vote is one that all are trying to capture. This opens a rich field for professional manipulators in the future elections, for if the negro vote holds together the campaign worker who can corral and deliver it will be a power to be reckoned with. Hat in hand and a fat check in pocket, candidates who need this vote will go to the proper sources and dicker for it. Tammany has always had the strongest vote control organization in the country, but may have to take second place if the present tendency keeps up.

The Liberal party of Great Britain was almost wiped out at the recent parliamentary election, losing more than 100 seats and coming up with only about 40. Apparently the division hereafter will be between the Conservatives and Laborites.

No matter how much breeders may disagree on the best variety of hogs, all are agreed that the road hog is the least popular of any species that moves.

SPEAKING OF HALLOWE'EN STUNTS!

Political Reviews of States

ILLINOIS—State issues have so far overshadowed national questions in the Illinois campaign that calculations as to the net result nationally were based on speculations concerning the outcome in the state contests. National attention has been focused on the development of the Republican vote of the home state of Charles G. Dawes, the G. O. P. vice-presidential nominee.

In the Democratic ranks, a vigorous state wide campaign was waged on the keynote issue enunciated by John W. Davis, "activity in government." The slogan has been hurled at the Republican forces as the paramount issue of both the state and national campaigns.

La Follette workers have conducted a vigorous campaign for their national ticket after weeks of indecision on the question of entering independent candidate for the Senate and House under the La Follette-Wheeler banner. The proposal finally was rejected in favor of a policy of endorsing certain of the old parties' congressional candidates.

Cross currents of political opinion appeared in the efforts of organized labor throughout the state, which gave rise to the chief speculative factor of the campaign. Governor Small, seeking re-election on the Republican ticket, was generously supported by organized labor in the April primaries, and labor leaders, including John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, took the platform at the post-primary state convention to warmly endorse the Small candidacy. A short time later, when the La Follette state campaign was organized, Mr. Walker took part in the preliminary discussions and ultimately appointed a personal representative to assist in the La Follette work in Illinois.

These developments led to charges by Democratic campaigners that an informal alliance existed between the governor's supporters and the La Follette national campaign. The charge was ignored by both the governor's friends and the La Follette workers.

Governor Small and his administrative record since 1920, have been the chief issues of the Democratic state campaign. A promise to dutifully prosecute civil suits for the recovery of interest on state funds alleged to have been misappropriated by Governor Small during his term as state treasurer was written into the Democratic state platform. Governor Small was acquitted in 1922 of criminal charges growing out of the state interest funds investigation.

The Democratic state campaign has centered about the interest suits, while Governor Small appealed to the electorate on a platform of farm principles and on his administration accomplishments in building some 2,500 miles of paved highways.

Prohibition enforcement was a minor issue.

MICHIGAN—A pompous shadow has spread over parts of Michigan, rock-ribbed Republican in its politics, while a religious issue, cloaked as a constitutional amendment, has tapped steadily at the voters' doors, demanding attention at the November general elections.

Republicans of the state where the party itself was born, are not uneasy about their prospects of party leaders agreed that Robert M. La Follette would make a strong race, especially in union labor and railroad centers.

The amendment would require all parochial and private schools to come under the same regulations that are provided for public schools. It had the united opposition of those churches having parochial schools.

A breach in the Republican ranks was mended with unqualified endorsement by convention resolution of U. S. Senator Couzens and Governor Grosbeck to succeed themselves.

Democrats claim a fighting chance to win Senator Couzens' senate seat through the candidacy of Jean Mortimer E. Cooley of the University of Michigan—a famous engineer, a scholar and an avowed dry.

Of the 13 congressmen from Michigan, all but one are Republicans, and all are seeking re-election.

INDIANA—With Ed Jackson, the Republican nominee for governor, backed by the Ku Klux Klan both in the primaries and in the general election, and his Democratic opponent, Dr. Carlton B. McCallister, denouncing that organization at every opportunity, the Klan and its activities have been the foremost issue in the 1924 campaign in Indiana. National and state issues were eclipsed early in the campaign by the Klan situation, although the Democrats pushed charges of gross extravagance by the last two Republican state administrations.

The fact that Indiana's debt is about $6,000,000 has been charged by the Democratic campaign men directly to alleged extravagance of the administrations of former Governor James P. Goodrich and former Governor Warren T. McCray. The Democrats pointed out that when former Governor Samuel M. Ralston, now the junior United States Senator from Indiana, left the governor's chair the latter part of 1916 the state was free of debt.

Two women are candidates on the Republican ticket, Mrs. Edward Franklin White, now assistant Attorney General for reporter of the Supreme and Appellate courts, and Elizabeth B. Dougherty of Wabash county for representative in the state legislature.

La Follette-Wheeler presidential electors, include several railroad union officials.

The wet and dry issue has been dormant.

OHIO—Republican political leaders in Ohio have been silent on the Klan question in the state campaign while Democratic leaders have been divided. Governor A. V. Donahy, seeking re-election and to whom the Klan has been friendly, has not denounced the organization, though importuned to do so by some state leaders, particularly Thomas J. Neeter of Cincinnati, and John A. O'Dwyer of Toledo. The Democratic state campaign committee recently was re-organized under the leadership of Neeter and O'Dwyer.

In the primary the Klan supported Joseph B. Steber of Akron, in the eight contested Republican gubernatorial contest, which was won by former Governor Harry L. Davis. Steber ran second polling more than 100,000 votes. The Klan has not made any announcement as between Donahy and Davis.

The gubernatorial campaign has been fought on strictly state issues with "honesty in government" of a state character, predominating.

National issues predominated in the congressional campaign, involving 32 seats in congress. Ohio did not elect a United States Senator this year.

dry campaign. The entrance of the La Follette independent presidential ticket, admitted by both Republican and Democratic state leaders to have considerable strength, made the presidential contest more complex than since 1912 when Roosevelt headed the Progressive ticket. In addition to these three major tickets, the Socialist Labor and Commonwealth Land Party presidential tickets also were in the field.

HE IS LOOKING 'EM OVER AGAIN

"Eight years of stomach and liver trouble reduced me to a walking skeleton. My skin was dried up and as yellow as a twenty-dollar gold piece. I was filled with gas and had severe pains in my right side. I could not think and had lost all ambition to do anything. Doctor's medicine did not touch me. My cousin advised Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, which snatched me from the grave. I have gained sixty pounds, eat like a hired man and am looking 'em over again." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One does not consume or money-refunded. Gwin & Mays and leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Who owns the Santa Fe?

More than 67,000 stockholders own this great railway. Several thousand live in the states it traverses. All have a voice in its management.

Every Southwest investor should buy a share in the Santa Fe and thus get a valuable interest in an institution that helps build up that section. Let it be Yours, in ownership as well as in service.

The Santa Fe operates in thirteen states and in these states there reside 7,635 of its stockholders. While this is almost the largest number on record, it is slightly below the year before. We should be very glad to see those residing along the Santa Fe Lines become much more generally interested in its stock, although both the common and preferred shares give a smaller return than many other investments promise. The high price is a deserved tribute to the property. Every investor in the Southwest might well buy one or more shares in the Santa Fe.

At the beginning of this year, the ownership of the Santa Fe was divided among 67,118 stockholders with an average of 53.1 shares apiece. Twelve months before there were 64,643 stockholders, averaging 55.4 shares apiece. The number of stockholders has increased steadily for many years and the average holdings decreased, resulting in an ever-widening distribution of ownership.

Among the stockholders are found:

Women 30,370
Men 30,931

This joint enterprise of a great body of our citizens is open to all to participate in as stockholders. Why then should any favor government ownership and the certainty of supporting the railroads as taxpayers?

Insurance Companies 114
Religious Organizations 91
Hospitals and Charitable Institutions 115
Educational and Scientific Institutions 109

Various Others 1,285

Since the organization of the present company in 1895 it has not failed in any year to earn its full interest, nor since dividends have been declared to earn them in full. The Preferred Stock dividends are limited to 5%. The first payment was made in 1898 at 1% and in 1900 full payments of 5% were begun and have been maintained for the ensuing 25 years without interruption. Common dividends were begun in 1901 at 3 1/2% and have been maintained steadily since that date with gradual increases, 6% having been paid since 1909.

For the railroads, as a whole, the records of the Interstate Commerce Commission show that at the close of 1923 there were 807,524 stockholders, or 30,392 more than the preceding year. The average dividends on the outstanding stock amounted to $4.03 per share.

REPENTANT EXECUTIONER
TURNS TO PEDDLING RUGS

TIPLIS, Russia.—One of the most remarkable and notorious of the characters in Russia is a Russian-German named Nicholas Shuman, who is called "the Commissar of Death" by the natives of Georgia.

He derives this sinister title from the fact that for a long time he was the official executioner of the dreaded Chkka in southern Russia.

His victims ran into the thousands. Shuman is now remorseful for all the heads he has cleaved, and has turned from human butchery to rug selling in the bazaars of Tiflis.

He may be seen any day hawking his wares to American or other foreign visitors to the Georgian capital.

He is easily identified by the natives by the fact that his harsh, determined face is marked by a deep scar, the result of a violent attack made upon him with a huge iron spike by an aggrieved Georgian whose friends Shuman had put to death.

"I killed these people," said Shuman to the correspondent, "because it was my duty as official executioner for the government to do so. I could never have done it in my personal capacity. I am repentant and want to forget the past. I want

No. 1

President John G. Mitchell, president of the Central State Teachers College at Edmond, spoke briefly, using lavish praise for East Central, its faculty and president.

James Hatcher, of Chickasha, commander of the Oklahoma division of the American Legion, told of the aims of the Legion in the state and solicited the cooperation of the teachers. The problems of the Legion and those of the teachers are very much identical.

Mr. Hatcher pleaded for the teachers to help wipe out illiteracy.

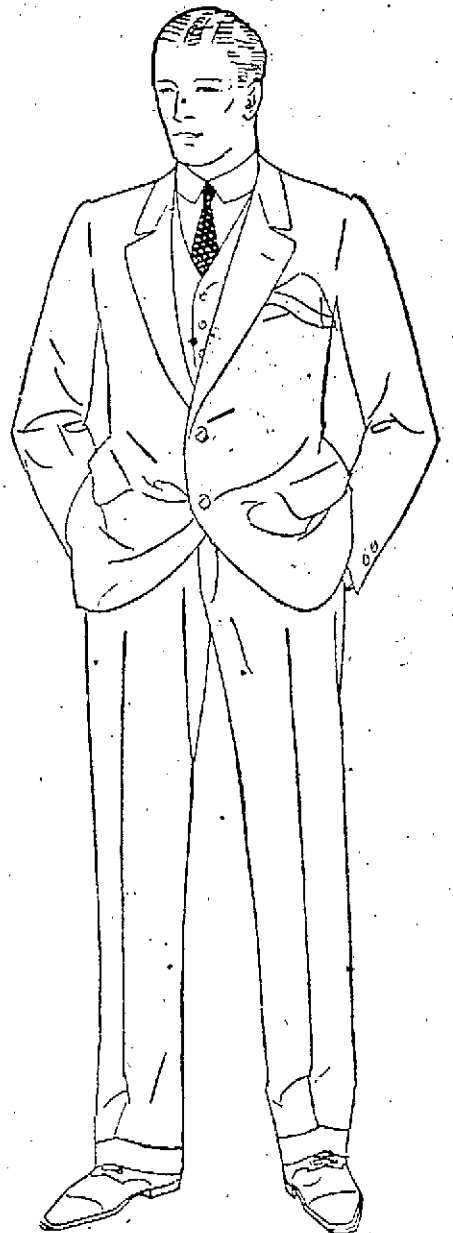

He also wants the teachers to see that a flagpole is erected in the yard of every school and that during school hours an American flag flies from these posts. Also the flag etiquette should be taught the pupils, as well as the code of morality.

Dr. G. W. Austin, president of the Women's College at Chickasha, brought greetings from the "biggest bunch of bobbed haired girls in the state." He pleaded for greater and better opportunities for the boys and girls of the state. His jokes and humorous phrases kept the audience laughing much of the time.

Dr. Linscheid, president of the Association, presided but did not deliver his scheduled address. He gave teachers to help wipe out illiteracy the time to the other speakers.

SOONERS WINDING UP TRAINING WEEK

Two Regulars to Be Out of Game Saturday on Aggie Field

(By the Associated Press)

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 30.—Stung by the memory of their defeat last Saturday when Drake took the long end of a 28 to 0 score, the University of Oklahoma football squad is winding up a week of intensive training for its annual clash with the Oklahoma A. and M. college team at Stillwater Saturday. The games promises to be one of the hardest on the university schedule.

Coach K. G. Owen is making no effort to teach the team new tricks, but will rely upon the line which defeated Nebraska. Most of the scrimmage periods this week have been devoted to perfecting defense to stop the Aggie backs.

The Sooners will enter the game without the services of two veteran linemen. White, guard, is still out with a broken wrist, received in the Nebraska game, and Penick, tackle, sustained a broken finger in the Drake contest which will keep him on the sidelines. Roy Gaffey was counted upon to replace Penick, but an X-ray examination revealed that a "chancey" horse which has kept him limping two weeks was a fractured leg bone. He cannot play Saturday, trainers say. Bell and McKinney are slated to fill in at tackle, while Wallace will continue to plug the hole at guard.

"Coat" Lamb, right halfback and punter, who frequently has been forced to leave the field this season because of an injured shoulder, may not start the game at Stillwater. Bill Haller, who was one of the most consistent ground gainers for the Sooners in the Drake game is in line for Lamb's place.

More than 1,000 Sooners, including the "Ruf Neks" and "Jazz Hounds" student pep orders and university band will be in the stands Saturday to cheer the O. U. warriors. Arrangements have been completed for a special train to take the rosters to Stillwater Saturday morning, returning to Norman after the game.

Saturday's contest will be the fifteenth clash between the schools since 1914. Only once, in 1917, have the Aggies been victorious. The score in 1922 was a tie 3-3. The Sooners won 12-0 last year.

AGGIES CLAIMING BETTER RECORD

Farmers Suffered Only One Defeat While Oklahoma Wins One

STILLWATER, Oct. 30.—So far this season the Oklahoma A. and M. college football team which will meet the University of Oklahoma here November 1 in the homecoming game has a much more impressive record than the Sooners.

The Aggies have suffered but one defeat, while the Sooners have but one victory to their credit. A. and M. bowed to the Texas Christian university eleven at Fort Worth, 17-14, after a bitter struggle. Oklahoma's only success was a brilliant victory over the University of Nebraska, champions of the Missouri valley conference. The hushers were humbled, 2-0, in the surprise outcome of the Southwest. After being defeated, 2-0, by the Central State Teachers college in the first game of the season, the Nebraska victory restored the morale of the Sooners fans and it was thought the team had hit its stride. When Drake overwhelmed Oklahoma 28-0, last Saturday at Des Moines, the Sooner spirits ebbed again.

Aggie land went into ecstasy when the farmers in their second tilt of the fall program, downed the University of Kansas, 3-0. While Stillwater hopes were somewhat dampened by the T. C. U. reversal, the victory over Phillips university last Saturday restored confidence.

Neither team has demonstrated a normal attack, while the defense of the Sooners apparently is far under the usual Owen variety. In four games the Sooners have scored but 14 points, two touchdowns, while 49 points have been tallied against them. In three games they have gone scoreless and in three of their four battles the Sooner goal line has been crossed.

A. and M. has registered 39 points in four games to their opponents 17. In three of the games the Aggies have kept their goal line untouched, while in all but one they have crossed their opponents line. A field goal defeated Kansas.

Following are the season's records of the two teams:

A. and M. 9; Northwestern State 0.

A. and M. 2; University of Kansas 0.

A. and M. 14; T. C. U. 17.

A. and M. 13; Phillips U. Oklahoma 0; Central state 2.

Oklahoma 14; Nebraska 7.

Oklahoma 0; Freshmen 12.

Oklahoma 0; Drake 28.

Uncle Kaybee; 6:45 popular songs; 7 Halloween party.

KDKA Pittsburgh (324) 6:15 Wimble, the Wanderer; 6:30 sport review; 6:45 address; 7 movie singing; 7:15 feature; 7:30 concert.

KGW Portland (492) 12 orchestra.

WJAR Providence (360) 7:05 musical.

KPO San Francisco (423) 10-2 orchestra, soprano.

WGY Schenectady (330) 8:30 dance, popular songs.

WBZ Springfield (337) 6:05 bedtime; 6:30 violin, cello, piano; 7:15 program; 8:15 organ.

KSD St. Louis Post Dispatch (548) 8:20 music, specialties.

WRC Washington (469) 6:45 Bible talk; 7:30 soprano; 7:15 talk; 7:15 contralto; 7:45 talk; 8 quartet; 8:15 trio; 9:30 dance.

"It is yet a problem, Miss Martha."

"Oh, Judge, we're all on nerves."

"I hear the news-boy with an extra: Look! Mother!—head lines—it's a MURDER! Oh! Oh!"

"Whatever is the matter, Judge? Is she dead already?"

"But suspicion rests on your son."

"Heaven and Earth! Judge! That is impossible! It's an idiot!"

"I feel like striking you!"

"Don't be excited, Huffstein; I'm your best friend."

"O Lord! He raves like a mad man!"

"We've been to New York—in an airplane."

"But the wedding?"
